Students Give SGA A Rating Of 'Good'

By Floyd Weatherspoon

A recent survey of 260 students gave the Student Government Association an overwhelming rating of good in its performance for the fall semester. The students were selected at random and included a cross section of the students.

The students were asked to rate the SGA on a scale that included excellent, good, poor and unchanged from last year. Those responding to excellent were 3; good, 214; poor, 31; unchanged from last year, 12.

Rochon Kearney, a junior from Greensboro, stated that she felt the SGA was doing a good job. She went on to say that "The SGA pushed for co-ed visitation and physical improvements on campus, but more improvements are needed academically."

Of the thirty-one students who rated the SGA as doing a poor job, a majority were freshmen. Some of the freshmen who gave the SGA a poor rating said, "The SGA is more responsive to the needs and problems of juniors and seniors and freshmen feel alienated." Other freshmen stated that they were unfamiliar with the functions of the SGA and wanted more meetings to be made aware.

A majority of those who felt the SGA was unchanged from last year stated that the SGA had not lived up to its promise of publishing budget and the constitution.

In a telephone interview, Marilyn Marshall, president of the SGA, was very impressed with the ratings and stated that "The SGA will strive even harder to maintain good standing with the students." She went on to reply to statements made by members of the Freshman Class, the publishing of the budget and the constitution.

Marilyn stated that the SGA had not intentionally overlooked the Freshman Class. She personally felt that the SGA has actively been involved with the Freshman Class, in that it did such things as help them financially with their Homecoming float, helped get a date to show a movie and helped them with other fund-raising activities.

On the subject of publishing the SGA's budget as of yet has not been finalized, but there was no problem in publishing the constitution.

Lloyd Inman, vice president of the SGA, stated that a supply has been ordered of the Constitution and will be made available to the students. Inman also stated that "Next Wednesday night the Attorney General, Clarence Jones, will discuss the Constitution with the Student Legislature which is open to the public."

Both Marilyn and Lloyd stated that rap sessions in the dorms will be continued to help make students aware of what the SGA is doing. Both also stated that suggestions from students are always welcomed.

'Sealed Lips' Release Information On Factors Surrounding Starting Date For New Gym

By Robert Brooks

After several weeks of sealed lips, information about the new gym has been released. The Athletic committee composed of faculty and administrators has been conducting meetings about the scheduled starting date and other factors that are delaying construction. Five key members on the committee are Dr. Quister Craig, chairman; Dr. Lewis C. Dowdy, Dean J. M. Marteen, liaison officer with the architect; and Dr. Roy Moore, who will be responsible for the care and maintenance of the building.

The gymnasium is proposed to contain 100,000 sq. ft. in vertical column form with a budget set at $3,400,000.

Listed below are the answers supplied by J. M. Marteen, dean of Administration.

"The new gym will be located on the North campus east of Moore Gym, south of Senior Hall, north of the Lutheran Center, and west of Booker St. Benbow Road will be rerouted by the city if the state will pay for difference in cost if it is longer than the original route. The over-all seating capacity was originally set at 8,000 but may be cut because of the long wait in the start of construction and the rise in the price of construction materials. It would have space for an olympic swimming pool, air conditioned offices for the staff and secretaries, a standard basketball court, cross courts for instructional basketball and pull-out seats for additional seating, but this too is not definite under the 1973 budget," Marteen said.

All of these plans are still in the dark because of the wait since June 71; and it seems that the longer the starting date is delayed, the 100,000 sq. ft. of space will continue to dwindle.

U. S. Should Keep Its Nose Out Of War

By Wanda Braswell

The United States should take care of its home affairs and work towards bringing peace here, according to the faculty, staff members and students at A&T.

Surveyed recently, the group felt the United States shouldn't become involved in the Middle East War.

Persons revealed that there were enough problems here in America for the United States not to become involved with foreign affairs.

Vivian Diggs, a senior Political Science major from Troy, stated, "I think the United States should not become involved in any way."

"I think the United States should keep its nose out of other people's affairs while millions are over here suffering," Vivian stated.

"The men, money and resources could very easily diminish some of the problems here at home," she added.

Waverlyn N. Rice, chairman of the Foreign Language Department, stated, "The matter should be taken to the U.N. and all of the help should be given to Israel."

Rochon Kearney, a senior English major from Warrenton, said she felt the United States (See Aggies, Page 4)

Student Courts Formed, Next Step To Function

The student courts have been formed; now the next step is to function. According to Clarence Jones, SGA attorney general, the Residence Hall Councils have been formed and members from each dorm have been selected to serve on the student courts.

As of yet, no cases have come before the courts because "it appears that no one has been guilty of breaking regulations as far as the Residence Council is concerned," Jones said.

The Student Judiciary Council presently is functioning with only three members. This is because last semester only three students ran for positions on the Judiciary Council.

Jones said that no provision is made in the SGA constitution concerning an insufficient number serving on the Judiciary Council. He stated that in the next meeting of the Student Legislature he plans to push for an amendment in the constitution concerning what should be done about vacant positions of the Judiciary

Jones feels that co-ed visitation will not present any problems as far as the courts are concerned. "I think we could have a decrease in problems," he said. Lt. Colonel Goode, dean of men, refers all the cases to the specific courts. There are seven courts that comprise the student judiciary system. Jones said that Dean Goode, Marilyn Marshall, president of the SGA, and he will meet to decide what courts will handle certain cases.

In describing his position, Jones said, "My position is constitutional and it requires me to make preliminary investigations by my office to get the facts for the case." Jones added, "My office, if deemed necessary and proper, can handle cases out of the court depending on the cooperation of the students."

Jones said that, in orientating people for the student courts during his tour of all the dorms earlier this semester, he made it clear that those serving on the (See Whether, Page 4)

Technicalities

Have you had much dealing with technicalities? They are shrewd little irritants which can wield a harsh sword.

They pop up when least expected with a burning sting and take on many forms—words, small objects and forgotten ideas. Although they are present all the while, they appear so insignificant that you overlook them in glancing at the important counterpart.

Let's think about a few of the "techs" that have made a day turn out wrong. Remember, the "I" last semester which you vowed would be removed by the deadline, but just skipped the mind as you became involved with other activities.

How about the time you read the instructions so fast that through an oversight you didn't see the not in the instructions?

Why do we overlook "techs"? A number of reasons might be the answer—one being that certain apparently insignificant things are very important, but have not been properly emphasized.

Another reason could be the failure to explain things. When things are listed but the 'why' thing should be done in that order is not explained, such as procedures of some past registrations, we are apt to take what we suppose are shortcuts.

Often times it is the technicalities, the little leaks which, put together, sink the sturdy ship.

Fingers In The Concrete

Editor of The Register:

For anyone who would really like to know, the reason for construction of sidewalks during Homecoming week was caused by stupid, discourteous, and disruptive Aggies.

Since the beginning of construction of sidewalks, the contractor has been plagued with foolish people marking up the concrete, tramping down the forms or pulling up the stakes, which mark off the location of the walk.

Things such as these have forced the contractor to spend twice as much time on his work.

This time is spent not because the job was not done right in the first place but because some fool or fools have destroyed his original work. He wants to give this school a decent finished product.

So due to the large number of educated vandals or to put it plainly, educated fools, coupled with the threat of bad weather, have made it necessary to continue the work to try to complete all the walks planned. There happens to be a large sum of money tied up in the project and, because of the amount of destruction, it is costing more in time money and labor.

So if you're really concerned about the matter, you can give me and a lot of other people a hand in trying to deter vandals and just plain big fools from destroying things that A&T needs. It is established fact that you have walked in the mud for quite a while, or maybe you have forgotten about rainy weather.

So, when you see someone scratching in wet concrete, taking down the forms, or pulling up the stakes tell them to please get the hell on and you will be doing yourself a favor. Think about it; think hard.

CRISIS

Students Or Degree Candidates?

All too often in our haste to leave school, or while working towards stated goals of graduating from school, we forget to learn. We substitute being a student or one who seeks knowledge, to become degree candidates or someone who seeks a degree to bargain for a job.

This is not to say that we aren't reading books, meeting assigned requirements, etc. It is to say that being a student is quite different from seeking a degree and that learning as a student goes beyond anything any instructor can teach you. Learning (as a student) is an area that encompasses as wide a scope as you will allow it. If you define learning strictly in the academic (book) sense, then you are restricting your ability to learn and thus limiting yourself.

Books are basically about people and things. So what better way to learn than to become involved with people and things? People in particular, offer knowledge without restrictions or limits. If you just learn one thing about just one-fourth of your fellow Aggies, then you will possess knowledge of over a thousand pieces of information that you didn't know before.

The greatest tragedy of being a degree candidate is that too much emphasis is placed on how much you know in terms of books. Thus the day-to-day learning process of gaining a knowledge of people is de-emphasized and sometimes dismissed.

As degree candidates we have failed to take advantage of the many avenues that should have been explored by students. A&T's learning potentials are international in scope. How many of us have taken the time to just sit down and talk to our international students about themselves and their country. We have brothers from the mother continent (Africa) right here on campus; yet we have fellow Aggies whose only knowledge Africa are documentations of Tarzan movies. You deprive yourself of a golden opportunity when you feel inferior, superior, or just don't bother to talk with them. Understanding Africa is understanding yourself.

We have Chinese, Indian(East), and other international students here, yet we neglect to enlighten ourselves with the knowledge that they could share with us. There is NOTHING about the United States that is domestic (solely) in scope. Politically, economically, religiously, educationally, and socially, America is international in scope. It is to our advantage and it speaks to our survival for us to understand these students and these countries as well as the country in which we live. Knowledge, opportunity, and understanding present themselves every day and so far we have chosen to remain ignorant and unresponsive. Even a degree candidate couldn't be hurt by learning.

Black Man Campaigns For Mayor In Birthplace Of Ku Klux Klan

PULASKI, Tenn. (AP) - The political campaign in this tiny West Tennessee town, the birthplace of the Ku Klux Klan, is of special interest this year. James Brown, a Black man, is running for mayor.

Residents say the Klan has died out here, but incumbent Mayor S. A. Garner, a bank director, says he is confident of victory.

Ben T. Bridgewater, current head of the KKK in Tennessee, said if Brown is qualified, he should be elected. "Well, sir, if that Black is an American, we have no objections if he is qualified. We don't try to deprive them of their just rights."

"Help me. Help me break up this thing," Brown, Giles County's first Black magistrate, tells residents in his door-to-door campaign.

The voters are responsive. One white woman said, "Yes, I know who you are. Mr. Brown, if you'll do what you say you will do I'll vote for you."

Both Garner and Brown may be seen walking from house to house these days. The mayor knocks on doors and says, "Hello, I'm Mayor Garner. I would appreciate your voting for me when the election comes up." And he points to his record.

Brown, a funeral home operator, recently campaigned in his opponent's home district.

"I'm taking it to him," he said. The challenger is hoping for strong working class backing. About 30 per cent of Pulaski's population is Black.

Young Blacks have adopted Brown's cause. "It's a nickels and dimes campaign so far," he said.

"But I haven't had to spend a cent of my own money so far."

Brown ran for alderman in 1967, but was defeated. In 1972, he was elected magistrate without opposition.

Six Western Electric Employees File Suit, Claim Discrimination

(AP)- Six Black employees of Western Electric, Inc., in the Burlington area filed suit Thursday on claims that the company discriminates against Black employees and job applicants.

The suit was filed in U. S. Middle District Court at Greensboro against both the company and the Communication Workers of America's Local 3061.

Filing the suit were Russel B. McBroom, Milton S. Enoch, George E. King, Clarence Jones Jr., Clarence Miles and Elijah W. Shaw.

The six are asking that the lawsuit be declared a class action on behalf of all Black employees and job applicants at the company's facilities in Alamance County.

In the action, the six alleged that the local union failed to take steps to achieve equal employment rights for Blacks and that the company has followed policies that discriminate against Blacks seeking jobs, better pay and benefits and seniority rights.

Voice Will Change On 'Household Hints'

By Phyllis Sanders

Eleanor Williams will be replacing the voice of Edna Rich on WEAL's Household Hints. Household Hints is a public service sponsored by the Cooperative Extension program at A&T.

Miss Williams said the Cooperative Extension Program is designed to uplift the lives of urban families in such fields as home management, housing, clothing, food etc.

North Carolina State University and the United States Department of Agriculture are also working with A&T as a part of the Cooperative Extension Program. The program is under a grant plus the financial contribution made by each group.

Miss Williams' title in this program is communication specialist. One of her many functions will be to help inform the public of the program.

Miss Williams said, along with the household hints service, WEAL also renders a service at 7:55 a.m. daily informing the public about the general services of the Extension program.

Aggies Look On Agnew's Resignation As Welcomed

By Ruth Allen

Spiro Agnew's resignation was welcomed. This was the consensus of a survey taken on campus. Only two people felt that he should not have resigned. They felt that he should not "protect" other people. Everyone polled was positive about his being guilty.

Agnew resigned October 10 at 2 p.m. rather than risk a long, drawn out trial and indictment by the Justice Department.

The most interesting observation about the vice-president's resignation is that everyone polled felt that Agnew wasn't the only guilty person involved in the White House. Sentiment ran strong for Nixon's resignation also.

John Taylor, senior, feels that Agnew was the victim of a "shaft." "I feel that there are more corrupt people in the administration."

Estell Harper, assistant professor of Education, feels that the resignation was premature. "I feel he made a mistake. There is corruption in the White House and he should not have shouldered the blame by himself. I am not condoning his actions, but I feel that he wasn't the only corrupt person."

"I feel that the vice president was a fool from the start, but he has really proven that he is crazy," stated Deborah L. Booker, a junior Nursing major. "He and the President are mad men. I'm glad the vice-president is gone, but the new one might be worse because he is another unknown like Agnew was. Nixon will probably be the next official to go."

Mack Johnson, a janitor in Cooper Hall, said he feels that "Agnew should have quit a long time ago and Nixon also!"

Another Cooper Hall janitor, Aronia Bethea, had this short statement to make: "Nixon should resign also."

"I don't think sufficient justice was meted," stated Dr. Jimmy L. Williams, chairman of the English Department. "I think that $10,000 was too light for Agnew. People serve time for stealing as little as $.30. It is very obvious that we have a double standard of justice."

James Pridgen of the junior class felt that Agnew's resignation was necessary because the government was "closing in on him." "I also feel he should have resigned because government officials use their positions to do such things. Agnew was caught at it."

Eunice Pratt, a junior, expressed the same idea. "Had Agnew not resigned, something else could have come up. He probably quit while he was ahead."

"I imagine that he is guilty of certain infractions," stated Mrs. Zoe Barbee, who was in the political arena last year. Mrs. Barbee, an instructor of humanities, thinks that Agnew resigned "to get the heat off other people." "He resigned to prevent total party disruption. In a sense, I feel sorry for him."

Lee Esther Opata, a graduate student and dormitory counselor, probably summed it up for everyone: "It is just one of the many steps which need to be taken so the White House can be cleaned up."

Judiciary Committee Sets Public Hearing

Washington (AP) - The Senate Judiciary Committee

Wednesday set a public hearing for next Monday to take testimony from Archibald Cox about his ouster by President Nixon as special Watergate prosecutor.

Committee members said after a closed-door meeting lasting nearly two hours that there was no discussion of hearing other witnesses.

Action was blocked on a resolution by a group of Democratic liberals on the committee calling on Nixon to reinstate Cox temporarily until Congress acts on legislation to provide by law an independent Watergate prosecutor.

Sources reported that Sen. Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb., the ranking Republican on the committee, invoked a rule to force a week's delay on the liberals' move.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., had said before the committee met that he and some other liberal Democratic members hoped to have Cox appear as a witness immediately

Food Service Director Discusses Future Of Murphy And Brown Halls

By Mary Cropps

A & T's new dining hall will be completed in the near future. Brown Hall and Murphy Hall will be bereft of eager voracious students. The walls will resound with the sounds of silence. However, Brown and Murphy will not be empty for very long.

According to Lawrence Munson, director of Food Services, Murphy Hall and Brown Hall will be put to good use when the new dining hall is ready for occupancy. Murphy Hall will be used for auxiliary services and for extra office space. There is also a possibility that the building will be used as a student center for day students. Munson said that Murphy is still a good building but it was not designed for food service.

Munson went on to say that Brown Hall will be converted to contain an à la carte type food service center. He said that this is similar to a cafe where students can walk in and buy any individual item. In addition to individual items, students will be able to purchase a full breakfast and a full lunch, and the cafe will provide a place for guests to eat. Munson stated that the layout and design for Brown Hall's new image have already been made.

Munson described the new dining hall as being split, with three levels. The first level will contain the storage area and dishware processing center. The second floor will be used for serving. The third floor will also be used for serving but on a smaller scale than the second floor. There is also a lounging area for students to wait for the serving lines to open.

A new feature of the dining hall is a conveyor belt. The belt will carry used trays to the dishware processing center. Munson said that the new dining hall will be able to produce and serve much better food than either Murphy or Brown Halls because of better equipment and more available space. He said that there will be a place for display of food and a better way of keeping food hot.

Man Arrested In Cooper For Carrying Illegal Drugs

Nathaniel Herring, who happens not to be a student at A&T, was arrested at Cooper Hall Wednesday Morning for trespassing and illegal possession of marijuana.

According to the preliminary report by the A&T Security Department, A&T security officer observed a male entering Cooper Hall about 2:30 a.m. Wednesday morning. With the assistance of the dorm counselor, two A&T security officers entered Cooper Hall to search Herring. Upon entering they found Herring with a resident of Cooper Hall. When Herring was searched, they found Marijuana in his possession.

He was then arrested for trespassing and illegal possession of marijuana. Herring was placed in the city jail and bond was set at $600.

should "take care of what's going on in its own country first." She further stated, "If any help should be given, let it be given to the Jews."

Regarding the United States' involvement, some citizens think oil has become responsible also.

"Oil is the factor. The whole situation stems from the oil shortage. Everybody will suffer one way or another. Yes, Oil is the big question now," commented Officer Roosevelt Raines, acting chief of the Security Force here at A&T.

A. D. Hilliard, a senior professional history major, stated that he had "two opposing feelings" concerning the United States' involvement with the Middle East War.

"First, America should follow through with the feeling of being alien to Israel," stated Hilliard.

"Secondly because Israel has territory in Egypt, I think she should relinquish them or give them back to the rightful owner," he added.

"They should try with their ability to bring peace. We're tired of war," Charles Robinson, an employee of the Campus Post Office stated.

"We're supposed to be one of the stronger nations-the United States and Russia-By all means bring peace. Let's try to set an example for others," he further added.

Mrs. N. H. Young, a counselor from Vanstory Hall, stated, "I think the best thing to do is work toward peace also work towards ways of restoring peace and stop supplying arms because if you supply arms, you will soon become involved."

Mrs. Virginia Smith, a senior English major from Greensboro, affirmed, "The Arabs were wrong in their initial coercion of the Jews. I believe the United States should not be coerced by threats of Arab's oil hold out from us, and we should be readily available to aid the Jews."

Coach Wylie Harris Explains Black Interest In Golf

By Sylvia Talford

One of the most interesting sports on the scene today is golf. Yet, for some strange reason, it is generally believed that this particular sport does not appeal to Blacks or does not fit in with the Black culture.

However, Coach Wylie Harris, who coaches the golf team here at A&T, feels that Blacks do indeed have an interest in golf. "It is not interest," he stated "but the fact that most Blacks do not have the time or the finances to participate in the sport." Harris also felt that since Blacks have been oriented to work 8-5 every day, they do not have the leisure time to spend.

"One reason for its lack of popularity," stated Harris, "is the fact that it has not been put into the sports program at most Black schools and emphasized as other sports are. That is why Blacks are not as familiar with it as they are with sports like football and basketball."

Golf is now fast becoming a more popular sport as people become more intellectual and have more free time. Coach Harris, a golf fan himself, commented that he now plays golf two to three days per week in that it takes an average of two hours to play 18 holes of golf.

Competitioners Win Big 26-6, Clinch Tie For Championship

In the Intramural game earlier this week undefeated teams battled in the independent league, the Golden Spikes, and Competitioners. The Competitioners won big 26-6 as they clinched a tie for the championship by winning and pushing their record to 4-0.

Eugene Edwards set up the Competitioners' first touchdown by running 50 yards to the Golden Spikes' 7 yard line on the draw play. From there, Ronnie Smith ran the pigskin over for the touchdown.

After forcing the Competitioners to punt on down, Stanley Westmoreland returned the punt 65 yards for the score behind a wave of blockers to knot the score at 6-all.

Smith came right back before the half by passing 21 yards to Edwards for the touchdown after a personal foul. Maurice Harper scored the conversion on a pass from Smith. The half ended 14-6, Competitioners.

The second half was all Competitioners as they scored twice to wrap up the victory. Smith ran over again from 10 yards out and passed to James Murrell for 35 yards for the final touchdown.

The decisive factor in the game was the inability to stop Smith - to - Murrell passing combination that kept scoring drives alive and the inability of the Golden Spikes to move the ball, especially to convert key third down situations against the tenacious defense of the Competitioners.

Men's Bowling Team Should Be Stronger

By Robert Brooks

According to Roger McKee, Bowling coach after last year's second place finish while competing against three Atlantic Coast Conference Schools, A&T is listed in Division IV with UNC-Chapel Hill, University of Virginia at Charlottesville, University of Maryland, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and North Carolina Central.

Returning from last year's team are James Correll, second among individual finishers; Chester Morrison, second in over-all standing on the doubles with Correll; Felton Ormond, Clay Cowan, and David Shelly, plus newcomers Leonard Frye, Joe Allen, David Draper, David Miller, William Barksdale David Purnell, William Copeland and Richard Stringfield from the men. The women return Leonetta Williams, Debbie McNair and Tina Wallace plus Veronica Woodard, Diane Glover, Carrie Holmes, Stephanie Loadholt and Doris Batts.

The men's team should be stronger this year with the addition of Allen and Purnell plus the returning members. Last year, Correll and Morrison came on strong in the second half to lead the team into its second place finish whereas the women returns only three veterans and could be weaker.

The men start their roll-off of the season this weekend with Correll, Morrison, Allen, Shelly Miller and Purnell going to Maryland for a division scrap Saturday and to Charlottesville for a role-off at Virginia Sunday.

After those matches, eight more will be remaining.

NCCU's Drama Guild Stages Black Comedy

By Yvonne McDonald

"No Place to Be Somebody", presented Wednesday night, is a Black-Black comedy by Charles Gordone. In 1970 Gordone won the Pulitzer Prize for drama for this play which took him seven years to complete.

"No Place to Be Somebody" was presented at the Paul Robeson Little Theatre by the North Carolina Central University's Drama Guild.

The play is a real story of life in the big city. It's a story of pimps, prostitutes, pickpockets, thieves, Blacks, whites, love, hate, and misery.

In one scene, Gabe Gabriel, the narrator, tells us "There's more to being Black than meets the eye; there's eating chittlings and watermelon, and wearing bright colored clothes. Black has a way of making your fingers pop and do a little dance. Black is carrying a razor, and it is making love with no hangups."

Gabriel said, "Identity can only be measured by the struggle and that life is a play, in which you must change your part over and over."

Life is Black against white. We are all considered, "dirty, filthy, niggers" by the whites and by Blacks who consider themselves "above Black," he cited.

"No Place to Be Somebody" is a very realistic, entertaining play that really lets you know, "There's more to being Black than meets the eye."

SPORTS NOTEBOOK

By Blannie Bowen

With all of the smoke finally clearing away from the Howard bombing of Aggeland, the attention is now focused on exactly what happened to A&T in the so-called football game Saturday night.

Howard filled the air with missiles and covered the ground with tanks and fleet-footed soldiers to completely crush the enemy, A&T in this case, 43-7.

The Bisons handled the Aggies as though they were playing a second-rate high school team. In all fairness to Howard University, A&T is having a poor year and Howard has just a super team.

A&T was just a below ordinary team to Howard. The Bisons are averaging close to 33 points per game and 334 total yards a game. Against the Aggies, the Bisons rolled-up only 320 total yards.

Howard normally gives 154 total yards a game to its opponents, but A&T got 156 total yards. The one thing that separates A&T from the ordinary Howard victim is in the number of fundamental high school mistakes that the Aggies committed.

The one question that most people are trying to find a solution to is whether Howard is really that good or if the Aggies are just that bad. Coach Hornsby Howell says that Howard is good, but not 36 points better than his team.

After viewing the game, many students feel that A&T was lucky that the score did not go higher because Howard could have easily made it 60-0 if the Bisons had not been penalized 125 yards.

Howard has come, destroyed, and gone, but definitely is not forgotten. The only thing that the Aggies have to play for now is the name of North Carolina A&T. With the possibility of an MEAC crown and a post season bowl game gone until next season, the Aggies must play the remainder of their schedule for "prestige".

The way the Aggies have been going lately, the A&T Band receives louder ovations for its half-time performance than the team receives for its few good plays. There might not be too much to cheer about in Baltimore this week-end either.

Morgan State has its Homecoming this weekend and the Aggies will provide the opposition. The Bears have won 25 games, lost 11, and tied three in the series record between the two schools.

A&T defeated Morgan last year at the Aggies' Homecoming and Morgan should turn the tables on the Aggies this year. Morgan is 2-2 in the MEAC and a loss would eliminate the Bears from the title race. The Bears come out of hibernation the latter part of every season, and this year A&T should fall by a touchdown in Baltimore.

FOR THEIR SUPERIOR play against A&T last weekend, Howard players Eddie Richardson and quarterback Mike Banks are this week's MEAC offensive stars.

Richardson is from Oakland, Calif. and Banks is from Detroit.

Julius Gamble kicked four extra points and three field-goals for 13 points against A&T, but he received only honorable mention as the MEAC star of the week.

BLACK COLLEGE FOOTBALL is played in four well-known conferences in the Nation. The CIAA or the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association is the oldest Black conference in the country.

The SIAC or Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference is the second oldest followed by the third oldest, the Southwest Athletic Conference (SWAC). The Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference (MEAC) is in only its third year of existence.

Basketball Coach Says

Team Will Have More Quickness

By Blannie E. Bowen

"Our team will have more quickness, speed, team play and most important, a winning attitude this season," said A&T Basketball Coach Warren Reynolds about the upcoming cage season.

The A&T Basketball team has completed only a week and a never be replaced, the Aggies must find a substitute for him. Outlaw is still around at one guard position, but here are five candidates seeking the other guard position vacated by Harris.

Perry, 6'-1" Stanley Parham, 6'-1" Calvin Norman, 6'-4" Steve Attledge and 6'-2" Leon Dickens are trying to make the squad at the guard position.

6'-5" Vincent Butler, 6'-4" Bobby Goodwin, 6'-7" Ronald Johnson, 6'-5" Caleb Johnson, 6'-4" Lawrence Newsome, 6'-6" Dexter Boone, 6'-6" Daniels and 6'-4" Allen Spruill are trying to hold their own at the forward positions.

Artis Jackson and Sinclair Colbert will be testing their 6'-9" frames at center again this year. Outlaw and Perry have the most playing time of this year's crop of guards.

Johnson, Daniels and Spruill received the most time at forward last year, Johnson has the hustle; Daniels, the consistency, and opposing players say that Spruill has more moves than "jello".

The Aggies are working on defense 90% of the time now. Coach Reynolds said that A&T will fast-break more this season and to fast-break, you must rebound.

Assistant Coach Levister is conducting special rebounding drills so that the Aggies can fast-break.

Maryland-Eastern Shore and Morgan State should provide the Aggies with their greatest competition because of veterans they have returning. Maryland has Tahir Skinner, Morgan has Marvin Webster and A&T has started a search for its third straight MEAC crown.

half of practice and already the injuries are starting to pop-up. All-MEAC forward Willie Daniels has suffered a sprained ankle and guard Raymond Perry has suffered a pulled hamstring muscle.

Daniels' injury is not too serious, but Perry will be out for about two weeks. Aside from these two injuries, the Aggies are healthy and eagerly awaiting the end of practice and the start of the season.

Daniels and All-American, All-MEAC games Outlaw will be representing the team as the co-captains for 1973-74. Frank Levister and former A&T all-American William "June" Harris are serving as assistant coaches to Reynolds.

With only a so-so 13-11 record last season, it would seem logical that nobody would be raving about the upcoming basketball season for A&T. This is just not the case by any means.

The Aggies captured the MEAC tournament championship last season by defeating Howard University and Maryland-Eastern Shore in the second annual MEAC Tournament.

Both of these teams had soundly smashed the Aggies during all the regular season games, but it is not how fast you run the race, but who wins the race. In A&T's case, the Aggies surely do know how to pace themselves because, in the past two MEAC Tournaments, A&T won both championships.

June Harris is gone from the A&T squad, and, although he can

TED MOODY IS LEARNING HOW TO FLY

"He's a classy guy. Always went all-out." These are the words of one of the Dartmouth football coaching staff about Ted Moody, a former star linebacker. Ted graduated from Dartmouth College in '72 with a degree in Economics and a mission in mind... to be a pilot... A Naval Aviator.

Now Ted Moody is going all out again. This time in Pensacola, Florida as a Naval Aviation Officer Candidate. He is finding out what it takes to be a Naval Aviator. He's finding it takes a lot of classroom work and long hours studying. It takes a lot of work on PT fields and obstacle courses. It takes special training like the parachute slide and the land survival mission in which you must hunt your own food and erect your own shelter. It takes a lot of time in a cockpit and even some old fashioned close order drill. And it takes a lot more. But, most of all, it takes the right kind of man.

No, you don't have to play football to be a Naval Aviator, but you do have to have a college degree and a lot of drive. And, when the time comes for you to wear your "Navy Wings of Gold" you will know what it takes. It takes your best!
